

approached sixteen Indians in the friendly manner, who were engaged in some of the late outrages, and I have announced a military commission of five officers to try them. It found guilty they will be immediately executed, although I am somewhat in doubt whether my authority extends quite so far. An example, however, imperatively necessary, and I trust will approve the act, should it happen that some real enemies have been seized and promptly disposed of.

I have information, apparently reliable, that Little Crow and his adherents are at Big Stone Lake, sixty-five miles above this where it is supposed he will be stopped by Standing Buffalo's Mission band of Sioux, as I have held a correspondence with the chief, who desire to remain on friendly terms with our Government. * * * Very respectfully, Your obd. serv't., H. H. SIBLEY, Col. Comd'g.

March of Col Sibley from Fort Ridgely to Yellow Medicine, and Battle of Wood Lake

On Thursday and Friday the forces were all across the Minnesota and encamped Friday night, Sept. 19th, by Lone-tree lake, some five miles above the Fort. The train was again in motion early next morning. We encamped for the night opposite the Lower Agency, within sight of the ruins of the government ware houses. Rev. Mr. Williams's church, together with all the wooden dwellings in and around the Agency, had been completely demolished. A party of scouts found the remains of Philander Prescott, the Indian interpreter, a few miles below the Agency, and having covered it with earth where it lay, stuck a slip of paper with his name on it on his grave. Next morning we resumed our march before the sun was an hour high. (Saturday, 21) during the forenoon we passed a number of houses completely ruined in the form of round mounds. Little Crow's village and securedundry trophies in the form of iron dresses and other Indian ornaments. Little Crow's house itself had been burned during the previous night. Near by the camp ground—over two hundred spears with the greater part of the poles still standing, where evidently the Indians had spent the first night of their retreat from the Lower Agency. The grounds were strewn with empty trunks, boxes, barrels, fruit cans and other things, the spoils of their flight and showing that they had no lack of provisions, either as to quality or kind.

As we approached Red Wood river we were some what apprehensive of an attack from the ravine through which the road runs, and a number of us were sent forward as scouts. We saw several Indians and being considerably in advance of the main body, commenced firing our curiosity by visiting several Indian houses. Other Day had hatched his horse to a bush at a little distance off, and was in one of the houses with several others, when he had his attention drawn out by the galloping up of a loose horse that had been left by another of the party, and hastened off just in time to see an Indian riding up his horse at full speed. He fired at him and came back grinning—his eye flashing, and with a look of being the first opportunity.

We crossed the river and rode on to Reynolds's house, which we found in ruins. We marched on and encamped at dark near Rice creek, over which the Indians had been on the precaution to burn the bridge, but the prisoners soon repaired it so that it but little impeded our march.

A few rods from the road was the remains of George Gleason—merely his skeleton completely dried, his skull broken quite with a large stone, all his clothes about him except his drawers and shirt, and his feet, as he was carrying to the Lower Agency—Sioux receipts of Major Galbraith, private accounts and letters. We covered him where he lay with earth. He had started from the Upper Agency about 3 P. M., August 18th, with Dr. Wakefield's family, in a carriage, and was there overtaken and killed, and the Doctor's family taken captive.

The next night (Monday 22d) we encamped on the shore of Wood Lake, just this side of the Three Mile Creek, over which they had effectually burned the bridge—in sight of the Yellow Medicine ruins. Through the day we saw a number of Indians riding round and reconnoitering, but out of reach of our guns.

As we were at breakfast next morning, we heard an alarm that the Indians had fallen on a foraging party after wood. The Renville Rangers, an ex-Lieut. Gorman, were sent out for their support. In a few moments the tops of the surrounding knolls were covered with Indians, on horse and foot, apparently trying to surround the camp. The 3d Regiment, under the direction of the Renville Rangers, who, supposing that they were a detachment of the Sioux, were ordered to support the Third having been ordered off to the left, they were nearly surrounded and scarcely effected a retreat. The artillery kept the opposite shore of the Lake clear.

Two companies of the Sixth had a skirmish on our left, and the Seventh regiment, under Col. Marshall made a charge into the ravine on our right, and drove the Indians from shelter there. Other Day pushed on in front of our lines, shot three Indians and brought back two ponies into our lines—more than squaring up our men at Red Wood creek. One man surrounded at the camp. He proved himself a man of indomitable courage. He went right in among the Indians, and exposed himself to the fire from both sides—several of our men mistaking him for an enemy, fired at him several times.

The Indians were evidently under poor management. Little Crow is falling into disrepute, and will find his power among them greatly diminished. He was in the distance, on a black horse, with a spy-glass in his hand. His brother is said to have come to the opposite shore of the Lake last night and ordered our tents, and thinking them fifty-eight, estimated our numbers to be about three hundred. Little Crow then intended to attack us during the night, but the upper Indians are said to have prevented it, telling him we had boasted he could whip them by open day and prove it.

About 12 o'clock the firing ceased, and there was some communication between the Indians and our lines under a flag of truce.

The Ambulance wagons brought in fifteen dead Indians—and no doubt numbers many more were engaged in the grass and in the creek. Several were found wounded in the water, completely submerged, except their nose and mouth. Those of the Third Regiment, Richard McElrose and Anthony C. Collins, were found with their heads cut off and sealed up with their hands so as to keep them from floating away.

A few of the Third, one of which Joe Campbell brought in, and among other things reported that on the night of the 18th when the Third Regiment and the Seventh were encamped at Lone Tree Lake, before the remainder of the force had crossed over to 250 Indians on their way to attack New Ulm. They had intended to fall upon the Third and Seventh regiments during the night and cut them off, but were discovered by a few who were posted near the river and at much greater advantage. But, seeing that reinforcements had arrived they were led again to desist from attacking us.

Their intentions were to wait until we were in the ravine crossing the Yellow Medicine river, and then make a small attack in front, enough to draw our forces on, and then to surround us in the grass where those ambushed around in the grass were to leap upon the baggage wagons and shoot the drivers and horses. So confident were they of the success of this plan, that they had sent Little Crow, that they brought their side of the river to take care of the plunder, expecting to make a clean sweep of us.

Captives and their camps are still at Red Iron's Village, 18 miles above Yellow Medicine, above which the upper Indians will not let them go, compelling them to stay there and fight us; and if to day we had been defeated, they would have joined in with them. But we can calculate ourselves that we have won a complete victory over them.

Joe Campbell reports they killed as many as 30, and a large number wounded, among whom were Mary's mother and Blue Earth, who have since died. Little Buffalo, a chief of one of the upper tribes, sent word to Col. Sibley, that if he would not exterminate the lower tribe he would. Our dead, four in all were buried this afternoon with the honors of war, and funeral services by Mr. Riggs, the Chaplain of the expedition.

The "Bloodless Fourth."

It will be remembered that when a call was made by the Governor for the Fourth Regiment, parties desiring to raise recruits, held out the inducement that the "Fourth" would never be called from the State and that the Regiment would remain in inactivity and beyond the reach of shot and shell. War effort such inducements had in raising the men we cannot determine, though doubtless some, whose business and social relations, demanded their occasional presence at home, were better satisfied to remain within the State.

The Regiment in the fall of '61, rendezvoused at Fort Snelling, where the Third Regiment was also quartered, and there became the subject of the sneers, jests, and vituperations of the members of the Third who, with marked arrogance and insult, prejudged them of cowardice, applying to them such names as "The Bloodless Fourth," "Pittsford Rangers," "Stay at home Veterans," "Squaw Hunters," &c., and a thousand epithets unbecoming the sphere of a gentleman.

The Fourth would have gladly avenged themselves of these vicious imputations, had not the officers in command by strenuous exertions prevented it. At last the bloody invincible "Third" left for the seat of war, and we hear nothing of them except an occasional statement that they are pleasantly engaged in guarding bridges, when suddenly we hear that they are all snored up at one camp, and bagged by a band of half-armed, half-clothed and half-starved savages, who saved them into a surrender by showing them a flag of capitulation. Blame is cast upon the officers, but that is easily accounted for in the fact that every one likes to shirk responsibility, privates none the less than officers.

The Fourth, so bloodless and effeminate, have gone forth also, and of late have had opportunities to try their fighting metal. Twice have they met the foe, driven them from their positions, with great slaughter, and earned a diadem of glory which awaits their return. Instead of sheathing their swords in the scabbard and delivering them to the enemy, they have delivered them point foremost and sheathed them in rebel gore. It is high time that the titles of the respective Regiments be changed to The bloody and invincible Fourth, and The bloodless and weak-kneed Third.

Minnesota Legislature—Extra Session.

The Legislature passed a bill establishing board of Auditors for the examination and adjustment of claims growing out of the Indian war, and elected as members of the Board Messrs. C. G. Reynolds, Charles McElrath and Matthew Donahue.

We have elsewhere spoken of the soldiers voting bill which passed the house by a vote of 30 to 6. The Militia bill has been passed by both Houses. An attempt was made in the House to secure exemption from military service from members of the Society of Friends, the German Baptists and other religious denominations whose faith bound them to a strict non-combatant in all circumstances, but the House refused to adopt the amendment.

A bill passed last week authorizing certain commissioners to provide for the necessities of refugees from the Indians and appropriating $25,000 for that purpose.

Also a bill legalizing the action of counties and towns in paying bounties to soldiers.

A bill has also passed the House providing for the pay of volunteer militia engaged in the Indian war.

Also a bill to prevent speculation by County Treasurers and other County officers in County orders.

A bill passed both Houses authorizing a State loan of $100,000 for military purposes—News.

Private Letter from Capt. T. D. Smith.

Through the kindness of his wife we are allowed to publish a letter from our old friend Capt. T. D. Smith, who, as is well known, was appointed by the War Department in July last, Assistant Brigade Quarter Master, and detailed to Fort Abercrombie. Since hostilities commenced in that region he has, in addition to other duties, assisted the Post by taking command of the citizens who flocked to the Fort for safety and defense.

Q. M. Office, Fort Abercrombie, D. T., September 25, 1862.

My Dear Wife: A messenger starts this evening and I must write to you if only a few words. We received a reinforcement last evening of about 400 men, and have now 500 effective men. Yesterday, before their arrival, we had a little skirmish, and several wounded. The rebels are hanging round to-day and our pickets have exchanged shots with them.

We have got men enough to whip the whole Sioux nation, if we had only the men they do not manage to send here, but an hoping things will be altered for the better soon. We commence to-morrow on the offensive and Mr. Sioux must fight or run, we are bound to whip or be whipped in the attempt. The arrival of the reinforcements has piled heavy duties upon me as Commander in Chief, and I shall be very busy in the future. I shall be very busy in the future. I shall be very busy in the future.

GLORIOUS VICTORY AT CORINTH.

Rebels Routed. 40,000 Rebels Engaged. Heavy Loss on Both Sides. 700 Prisoners Taken. Rosecrans Advancing to Rehearse the Attack.

Cairo, October 5.

Glorious news to-day from Corinth. The rebels were routed and are retreating.

The rebel loss was very heavy, and ours is also large.

Gen. Dodge sent a message from Columbus to prepare for a large number of wounded.

Priest, Van Dorn, and Lovell were in command of the rebels, who numbered 40,000.

Our troops are said to have acted nobly. We can get no distinct account of Friday's battle.

On Saturday morning Priest attacked Rosecrans' right, and Van Dorn his left. The assault was made with great determination. At one time our center was penetrated, and the rebels reached the Corinth House near the center of the town. They were driven out at the point of the bayonet.

Van Dorn led his column over an abatis on the left, up to within fifty yards of a ditch, exposed all the time to a scathing fire of grape and canister. They were driven back by a charge of the 27th Ohio and 11th Missouri.

The battle lasted till half-past eleven, when the rebels began to retreat towards Hatchie river.

The number of killed and wounded on either side is not known.

The rebel loss is reported to be much larger than ours.

We have between 700 and 1,000 prisoners, not including the wounded.

Gen. Hurlbut marched on Saturday to the south side of Hatchie river, thus cutting off Price's retreat.

Rosecrans moved early this morning to renew the attack.

Cannonading was heard to day in the direction of the forces.

Price is in the forks of Hatchie river, between Humboldt and Rosecrans.

The Fourth Regiment Engaged.

Dispatch From Col. Sanborn to Governor Ramsey.

Cornish, October 5, 1862.

To Governor Ramsey:

Casualties in the Fourth Regiment, in the battles at Corinth, on the third and fourth inst:

Killed—Capt. Mower, of company K; Private Frank Nelson, company K.

Wounded—Lieut. Crawford, company B, severely; five privates wounded slightly; August M. Haves severely wounded by falling on him.

All the wounded are well taken care of. The regiment conducted itself most gallantly.

The victory was complete and glorious. (Signed) JOHN B. SANBORN, Colonel Commanding.

War Summary.

Gen. Buell's Army has arrived at Louisville, Kentucky, after a severe march of two weeks. It is the intention to concentrate the force there preparatory to driving out the rebels from that State.

Gen. Morgan, who has been for some time guarding Cumberland Gap, and strongly menaced by Rebel forces, has succeeded in making his way to Kentucky, without loss of troops or baggage, having first so blocked the Gap with stones that it will be impracticable for the enemy to pass through it. He will probably join Buell's forces at Louisville.

New York, October 6.

A letter from the army on the upper Potomac says the rebels have begun the work of destruction on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. Bridges are cut away, embankments destroyed, and rails and stock carried off.

A letter from Pensacola says the harbor and defense of Mobile have lately become the subjects of close study in naval circles here, as that will probably be the next point of attack.

No considerable rebel force is garrisoned either Charleston, Mobile, or Savannah.

It is believed that much has been done in the way of obstructing channels and constructing defensive works along the water approaches to all three cities.

The admiral fleet is already very formidable.

LOTISVILLE, October 1.

Much the larger portion of Buell's army has moved towards the interior of Kentucky, in several columns, over different roads.

New York, October 1.

A Port Royal letter of the 26th says the steamer Nashville is penned in the Ogeechee river, with no chance to escape. Her last chief officer has been captured in a pilot boat.

Charleston straits are defended by rifle pits, and the bay is obstructed by piles, drifts, etc.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

St. Paul Press.

A Republican Newspaper.

The success which the Press has achieved affords the best evidence of its value as a newspaper, and that it more fully meets the wants and views of the people of Minnesota than any other paper.

It has attained a circulation in its several editions greater than any other paper in St. Paul, or north west of Milwaukee.

The Press will continue to advocate the interests of free American labor; the perpetuity of the Union and the preservation of Republican institutions; honesty and economy in Government; the vigorous prosecution of the war for the suppression of the slaveholders' rebellion; the use of every available means to crush the rebellion effectually, without regard to the preservation of the "peculiar institution" for which the war was begun.

The Press will give the current history of the war. The general news of the day. All the telegraphic news of the associated Press of the United States the morning that it is given to the public in the leading cities of the Union; The proceedings of Congress and State Legislatures; and by authority.

Opinions of the Army.

It seems to be the confident belief of the best informed military men in Washington, that the army of the Potomac has received the President's conditional emancipation proclamation with the utmost unanimity and enthusiasm.

General McClellan has given his opinion and assurance on this subject, and the Government is strongly fortified in the belief that the President has taken by other corps of the army as far as it is concerned, is universally regarded as a war measure. This is Mr. Lincoln's interpretation of it, which he freely expressed.—Wash. Cor. Cin. Com.

'Mama, may I go fishing?'

'Yes, lad, but don't go near the water. And recollect, if you're drowned, I shall skin you as sure as you're alive.'

A Dublin journal observes that a handbill announcing a public meeting in that city states, with boundless liberality, that "the ladies, without distinction of sex, are invited to attend."

An actor, who was extremely ugly, was playing a part in which a lady had said to him—"Ah! sire, you change countenance." "A wag in the pit cried out, "Let him do so, pray don't stop him."

Francis the First being desirous to raise one of the most learned men of the time to the highest dignities of the church, asked him if he was of noble descent.

"Your majesty," answered the abbot, "here were three brothers in Noah's ark; but I cannot tell positively from which of them I am descended."

A mendicant impostor, ticketed "deaf and dumb," recently took his stand in a fashionable locality. Presently a lady came past, who, with equal humanity and simplicity, asked him how long he had been deaf and dumb. Completely thrown off his guard, the rogue immediately answered, "From birth, madam." "Poor fellow!" said the lady, and gave him half-a-crown.

Unless we prosecute this war to a successful close, our country will soon have no light but the light of other days.

Recently Col. Bissell caught a guerrilla in the act of playing his vocation, and no rope being at hand, he was strung up with a piece of telegraph wire. It answered the purpose pretty well.

Persons without front teeth have been held to be exempt from the draft on account of their not being able to "bite a cartridge." In consequence of this, a good many fellows, it is said, have had their front teeth pulled. But now an order from the War Department prescribes that the toothless shall not be exempt, but subject to draft for the artillery service. Good enough for them.
